

Allrecipes application has a fun splash screen and really draws you in to their site. I love the minimalistic type of recipe applications as most of them have too many images and things going on that draws away from the information you are looking for. I like applications with less fluff and more substance, this is why I also like the minimalist baker site as it gives you lots of info with the GF (gluten free) tags as well as many others for the recipes however it does not feel crowded.
